"Show Me Your Samples"

One-reel Star Comedy

MR. STRONG BREATH and Miss Powder Nose are employer and stenographer in the Stone Age. She takes his dictation on a stone.

One million years later we see them. Bert, the boss, is kept on the jump dodging bill collectors. A salesman tries to get in right with his client by ridding the office of collectors, but makes a mistake and throws Bert out.

Bert receives a telegram to hurry to another city with samples of sand-paper bath towels. On the train, he goes into the shower bath to wash, when the porter, brushing off Bert's clothes, lets his trousers and coat blow away off the observation platform. Bert does a "September Mo(u)n."

They reach their destination and Bert seems to be out-of-luck. By some clever head work on the part of his stenographer, however, he manages to land a big order.
